

Lincoln Presidential Library And Museum Closing Again To Protect Public Health

November 18 2020 2:36 PM

SPRINGFIELD – To help prevent the spread of coronavirus, the Abraham Lincoln Presidential Library and Museum campus will close to the public as of Friday, Nov. 20. The ALPLM’s three buildings, the library, museum and historic Union Station, will be closed for at least a month.

The museum's annual display of its copy of the Gettysburg Address will be postponed until sometime next year. On Thursday, the speech's anniversary, we will launch a virtual exhibit to celebrate the speech and help people understand why it holds a special place in American history.

While members of the public will not be able to visit, the staff will continue working to protect Lincoln documents and artifacts, maintain museum exhibits, conduct research and plan future programming.

People with questions about Lincoln or Illinois history will still be able to get help from library staff online or by telephone (217-524-6358). The presidential library's website and social media channels will continue offering information about the 16th president.

"As coronavirus surges again, public health has to be the top priority," said Melissa Coultas, ALPLM acting director. "We look forward to the day when we can safely welcome guests again."

Anyone who has bought tickets to the museum or to upcoming events will automatically receive a refund. Please check for updates at www.PresidentLincoln.Illinois.gov.

The Abraham Lincoln Presidential Library and Museum uses a combination of rigorous scholarship and high-tech showmanship to immerse visitors in Lincoln's life and times. The library holds an unparalleled collection of Lincoln books, documents, photographs, artifacts and art, as well as some 12 million items pertaining to all aspects of Illinois history.

You can follow the ALPLM on Facebook, Twitter and Instagram.