February 24 2021 1:00 PM

ST. LOUIS – Save big on the Gateway Arch’s Tram Ride to the Top experience! On special value days in February, March and April, tram tickets are just $12 for adults and $8 for kids, a savings of $4 per ticket versus peak summer pricing.

Here’s another way to save even more on those special value Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays: With the America the Beautiful National Park Pass, visitors can enjoy an additional $3 off their adult tram ticket. On a value day, an adult tram ticket is just $9 with the National Park Pass.

“Now is a great opportunity for residents in the bi-state area to visit America’s tallest monument and save on doing so,” said Gateway Arch Director of Operations Sarah Clarke. “In addition to saving on the tram ride, the re-imagined Museum at the Gateway Arch is always free. Plan a self-led tour before taking the Tram Ride to the Top, where you can view downtown St. Louis from 630 feet in the sky.”

Value pricing on tram tickets is available on select dates throughout the year. View the 2021 pricing calendar and see this year’s value days with the Gateway Arch’s online pricing guide at gatewayarch.com/buytickets.

COVID-19 Policies and Protocols

The Tram Ride to the Top experience has been modified to comply with COVID-19 policies and protocols – and the changes are receiving rave reviews from visitors. Families or visiting groups each get their own tram car. Significantly reduced capacity in the Arch observation deck allows groups or families ample space to social distance at the top. Each group or family also gets their own assigned observation deck windows to view the sights of downtown St. Louis and the Mississippi River.

The National Park Service requires face coverings for all Gateway Arch visitors ages 2 and up, with no exceptions. You can view the Arch’s health and safety policies and protocols at gatewayarch.com.
