ALTON – Poor old Ebenezer Scrooge is dead. But before he goes quietly into that dark night, a few of his old friends and relatives gather to remember him at a memorial service in one of the finest funeral parlors in London. There's more than a ghost of a chance this will be an event you'll never forget!

Bankside Repertory Theatre presents a fun Yuletide evening for Dickens fans and all those who love the true spirit of Christmas. Written by founding member Geoff Callaway, the play presents some familiar characters telling their own version of the Christmas classic. "We're always grateful to our friends at Jacoby Arts Center for supporting us for several years," says Caleb King, a member of the cast and another founding member. "And we're delighted to present this happy event for the Christmas season."

The theatre company had to close for a period during the pandemic but returns in full force with a cast that includes Chrissy Calkins Steele (also a founding member), Sarah Goins, Barbara Foster, Jack Dearborn, and Matthew Cocks.

Showtimes are Saturday, December 4th & 11th and Friday, December 10th at 7:30 pm; Sunday, December 5th and 12th at 2 pm.

Tickets are $20 for adults and $10 for all students.
