ALERT

St. Louis County Police authorities said the Amber Alert was issued after police said the child's 24-year-old mother took her from Children's Hospital in the Central West End, violating at least two previous orders.

St. Louis County Police said the 10-month-old girl was brought to Children's Hospital appeared drastically underweight. The 10-month-old weighed only 13 pounds and the average weight for a 10-month-old girl is 13 pounds.

The Amber Alert lasted more than two hours before it was canceled. St. Louis County Police said a protective custody order was issued for the child, but the mother took the child out of Children's Hospital in St. Louis against the protective custody and doctors' orders.
