Proceeds from the event will benefit Alton/Godfrey area charities through the ACSL grant program. ACSL donates 40 percent of funds raised to beautification and landscaping projects in the area and 60 percent to projects that benefit the community in many ways, including food banks and warming centers.

ACSL volunteers work in civic, cultural, education, health, youth and beautification arenas, said Diane Foster, the public relations chair for ACSL.

Foster and Miller noted that the ACSL is always looking for new members interested in volunteering in the community.

Meetings for the organization are the second Monday of every month. Members can choose where to volunteer. For those with interested in volunteering, contact Foster at (618) 61-5985. The Alton Community Service League has been in existence for 68 years and has been wrapping Christmas gifts at Alton Square Mall for 45 of those years.
