Students need more than just academics. That's why our model is grounded in socialemotional best practices: student circles, relationship work, and restorative justice. Diverse by design, Kairos is working to integrate St. Louis one class at a time.

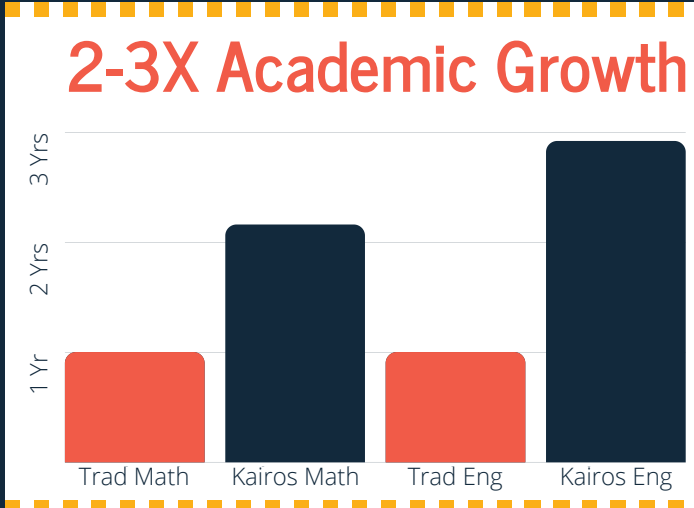

99th percentile nationwide: student-teacher relationships

percentile nationwide: student safety (mental & physical) 99th

90th percentile nationwide: rigorous teacher expectations

percentile nationwide: student sense of belonging 97th

Kairos students grew 2-3 times as fast as those in traditional classrooms. In just half a year, our students grew multiple grade levels in both English and math!

“Projects are fun. We get to do what adults do in the real world. We were studying cells, so we ran an experiment on our own cheek cells. It was cool that actual scientists use what we're learning.”
Terance (6th Grade)

“When I'm responsible, my coach gives me the choice to study how I want. I like whiteboarding my ideas out with friends and teachers.”
Rowan (6th Grade)

“Personalized learning lets me work at my own pace. I can move faster when it's easy, and if I don't get it, I can slow down.”
Gabe (6th Grade)
