After her husband retired, they spent every summer in northern Michigan where she grew up. They always made their vacation home open to family and friends who would travel there to visit them. This continued until her health failed and she could no longer make the trip. She had several different jobs in her early life but was mostly a wife, mother, grandmother, daughter, sister and aunt. She was loved by family, caregivers and a lot of other people whose lives she touched and she will be terribly missed.
